Young Professionals

Join the Silicon Valley Arbitration and Mediation Center's Young Professionals for a one hour interactive webinar as we explore this question and others that may arise as artificial intelligence becomes integrated in the practice of international arbitration. With the assistance of specialists in the field, we will investigate how AI may assist and shape decision making and advocacy and the rules that will guide this transformation.

Panelists

Apoorv Agarwal, CEO, Text IQ

An expert in Machine Learning and Natural Language Processing, Apoorv is dedicated to understanding and improving how humans and machines benefit from working together. With Text IQ, he aspires to harness and channel the complementary strengths of humans and machines towards solving high-stakes enterprise data problems. Prior to Text IQ, Apoorv received the IBM Ph.D. Fellowship award in recognition of his work as first author on two separate patents for IBM's Watson. He received his M.S. and Ph.D. in Computer Science from Columbia University, and received the Andrew P. Kosoresow Memorial Award for Outstanding Performance in teaching.

Jacob Turner

Jacob Turner is an international disputes lawyer and author, who has represented sovereign states including Argentina, Greece, Iraq, and Russia. Jacob holds law degrees from Oxford and Harvard and previously taught law at Oxford and King's College London. Jacob is the author of a new book on the regulation of AI, due to be published later this year: Robot Rules (Palgrave Macmillan). Robot Rules explores the novel issues to which AI gives rise, from responsibility for its actions to questions of how to set and implement ethical standards. Jacob has lectured on the legal and policy implications of AI at Cambridge University and has recently started collaborating on the development of the UK's AI strategy with the All Party Parliamentary Group on AI.
