

American Society of International Law

The Latin America and Dispute Resolution
Interest Groups are pleased to invite you
to a roundtable discussion:

A First Look at Litigation under the Helms-Burton Act

Title III of the Helms-Burton Act, which was enacted in 1996, created a private cause of action for US nationals to file suit in US courts against persons that may be “trafficking in property” that was confiscated from those US nationals by Cuba. Those provisions had been suspended by every President since the Act was enacted, but in 2019 President Trump allowed the suspension to expire, and several suits were promptly filed in US courts.

This roundtable will explore some of the many interesting questions that arise under domestic and international law as a result of this change in the landscape. Is it likely that many more suits will be filed? What are the main issues that the cases raise and how will the US courts deal with them? How will the European Union, Latin American countries and others around the world react to this change, given long-standing complaints that the Helms-Burton Act represents an overreach of jurisdiction on the part of the US?

Please join us for a lively and interactive discussion and debate.

Tuesday, October 15th, 6pm – 8pm

ASIL Tillar House
2223 Massachusetts Avenue, NW
Washington, DC

Discussants:

David Baron, Crowell & Moring LLP

Paul Stephan, Professor, University of Virginia School of Law

Jason Poblete, Poblete Tamargo LLP

Gretel Echarte Morales, Mayer Brown LLP

Steven Davidson, Steptoe & Johnson LLP

Moderated by

Perry Becky, Berliner, Corcoran & Rowe LLP

American Society of International Law

The Latin America and Dispute Resolution
Interest Groups are pleased to invite you
to a roundtable discussion:

A First Look at Litigation under the Helms-Burton Act

Title III of the Helms-Burton Act, which was enacted in 1996, created a private cause of action for US nationals to file suit in US courts against persons that may be “trafficking in property” that was confiscated from those US nationals by Cuba. Those provisions had been suspended by every President since the Act was enacted, but in 2019 President Trump allowed the suspension to expire, and several suits were promptly filed in US courts.

This roundtable will explore some of the many interesting questions that arise under domestic and international law as a result of this change in the landscape. Is it likely that many more suits will be filed? What are the main issues that the cases raise and how will the US courts deal with them? How will the European Union, Latin American countries and others around the world react to this change, given long-standing complaints that the Helms-Burton Act represents an overreach of jurisdiction on the part of the US?

Please join us for a lively and interactive discussion and debate.

Tuesday, October 15th, 6pm – 8pm

ASIL Tillar House
2223 Massachusetts Avenue, NW
Washington, DC

Discussants:

David Baron, Crowell & Moring LLP

Paul Stephan, Professor, University of Virginia School of Law

Jason Poblete, Poblete Tamargo LLP

Gretel Echarte Morales, Mayer Brown LLP

Steven Davidson, Steptoe & Johnson LLP

Moderated by

Perry Bechky, Berliner, Corcoran & Rowe LLP

Registration is available at www.asil.org/events